Historical Note

C. Ray Stokes was the first employee of the Texas College of Osteopathic Medicine in 1969. He served as founding director of development, business manager, purchasing agent, public relations director and as registrar. Stokes opened TCOM's first office and hired his wife Edna as secretary and bookkeeper. He hired the school's first Dean, Henry Hardt, PhD. Stokes was instrumental in raising funds for the purchase of some of the properties acquired near Med Ed I, later named the Carl E. Everett Education and Administration Building. He also coordinated the effort to raise money from osteopathic physicians around the state to support of the school. Stokes received TCOM's Founders' Medal in 1986.

Restrictions The collection is open for research. The collection is non-circulating and can be viewed by appointment.

Provenance The C. Ray Stokes Collection was formed by C. Ray Stokes from his own materials collected when he served as the first TCOM's employee from 1969-1980, and is therefore a part of the institutional archives.
